VICE RECEIVES 2021 PRIMETIME EMMY® NOMINATION FOR OUTSTANDING HOSTED NONFICTION SERIES OR SPECIAL

Nomination Marks VICE on SHOWTIME's Second Consecutive Nomination in this Category and 13th Primetime Emmy® Nomination Overall

BROOKLYN, NY (JULY 14, 2021) -- The National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences has announced that VICE, the weekly newsmagazine produced by VICE News for SHOWTIME, has been nominated for a 2021 Primetime Emmy® Award in the Outstanding Hosted Nonfiction Series or Special category.

The nomination is VICE's second consecutive nomination in the Outstanding Hosted Nonfiction Series category and VICE News' 13th Primetime Emmy® nomination overall.

The nomination also adds to VICE's extensive roster of honors in 2021, including a Peabody Award, Gracie Award, James Foley Medill Medal for Courage in Journalism, an Overseas Press Club Award and the duPont-Columbia Silver Baton .

“This nomination is a testament to the fearless work of the journalists at VICE News,” said Subrata De, senior executive producer for VICE. “We’re incredibly honored that the Academy has recognized our series for a second year and grateful for this opportunity to share these underreported stories.”

VICE delivers immersive reporting from the frontlines of conflicts, civil uprisings and political upheaval, taking on a range of issues from police brutality in Nigeria to the continued shockwaves of US foreign policy in Afghanistan, Iran and Yemen. Part one of VICE season two premiered in March 2021 on SHOWTIME and will return with new episodes later this fall.

Beverly Chase is the series executive producer and showrunner; Craig Thomson is co-executive producer and supervising producers are Robert Booth, Greg Wright, Paula Salhany and Amanda Pisetzner. Subrata De is senior executive producer and EVP, VICE News.
