The “Out of the Blue” issue features global fashion and cultural icon, Kim Kardashian West in conversation with playwright Jeremy O. Harris. Kim opens up about being neighbors with Madonna, watching anime with her kids, hosting Saturday Night Live and how, “People might not get that we're absolutely in on the joke.”

Alastair McKimm, Editor-in-Chief, i-D about the new issue said, “Collaborating with Tiffany & Co. on this winter issue has been an incredible moment. An iconic brand with true heritage which is also truly ingrained and embedded in modern, cultural moments. It felt like a perfect partnership as we built the issue in which we hand-picked some of the most iconic talent that truly embodies the values of inclusion, diversity and authenticity.”

A Look Inside The Issue

Additional features include:

- Mario Sorrenti’s wide-ranging portfolio continues at the centre of the issue with stark photography of additional cover stars along with in depth interviews.
- An interview with this season’s breakout fashion designer Peter Do, who made his runway debut during New York Fashion Week.
- Fashion stories from Amy Troost, Stef Mitchell, Sharif Hamza and Bibi Borthwick, and i-D speaks to fashion icons Marc Jacobs, Angelo Baque and A$AP Nast.
- Artist Nick Waplinton creates an incredible new body of work after traveling from Los Angeles to New York to London to capture some of the most incredible artists working today, shooting everyone from Paul McCarthy to Catherine Opie.
- This issue is rounded out by Helmut Lang, our artist in residence, who presents a new version of his work Something to Think About, a cascade of blackness to fade the issue out.

Alongside the issue, i-D has created a series of videos to accompany the issue. The videos will be rolling out in i-D's digital platforms every day this week.
